THE GAZETTE.

TUESDAY EVENING, JANUARY 13.

[COMMUNICATED. In the Attic.

This is my attic room, sit down my friend. My swallow's nest is high, and hard to gain; The stairs are long and steep; but at the end, The rest repays the pain.

For here are peace and freedom, room for speech,

Or silence, as may suit a changeful mood: Society's hard by-laws do not reach This lofty altitude.

You hapless dwellers in the lower rooms See only bricks and sand and windowed walls; But here, above the dust and smoky glooms,

Heaven's light unhindered falls. So early in the street the shadows creep, Your night begins while yet my eyes behold The purpling hills, the wide horizon's sweep,

Flooded with sunset gold. The day comes earlier here. At morn I see Along the roots the eldest sunbeams peep; I live in daylight, limitless and free,

While you are lost in sleep. I eatch the rustle of the maple leaves I see the breathing branches rise and fall, And hear, from their high perch along the eaves,

The bright necked pigeons call. Far from the parlors, with their garrulous crowds, I dwell alone, with little need of words; I have mute friendship with the stars and > clouds, And love trysts with the birds.

So all who walk steep ways, in grief and night, Where every step is full of toil and pain, May see when they have gained the sharpest height, It has not been in vain.

Since they have left behind the noise and heat; And, though their eyes drop tears their sight is clear:

The air is purer and the breeze is sweet, And the blue heaven more near. FLORENCE PERCY.
